$300,000,000 SAID TO BE PLEDGED IN N. Y.

Sixty Per Cent of Anglo-French External Credit Loan Will Be Subscribed There.

NEW YORK, Oct. 1.—Opposition which at one time threatened to cause ome embarrassment to the bankers handling the Anglo-French external credit loan for $500,000,000 has melted way so far as it affects the success of the operation.

of the operation.

According to the New York bankers closely identified with the financing, the response to the proposed joint sale by England and France of the 5 percent bonds, which will net the investor more than that figure, has been "tremendously favorable," with a demand for the issue both from institutions and individuals so heavy that the offering will be considerably oversubscribed.

Promised subscriptions from New York financial institutions on the first day following the announcement that the loan negotiations had been completed totaled $100.000.000. Subscriptions since then, it was said unofficially, amounted for this city alone above the proportion that was expected to be taken here, 60 per cent of the offering, or $300.000.000, with one single subscription of $30.000.000 reported and not denied by members of the underwriting syndicate.

Responses Are Gratifying.

Responses Are Gratifying. At the office of J. P. Morgan & Co.

it was said at the close of the day that he demand for participation in the loan was more than gratifying. Even Chicago, where so much opposition recently had been indicated, is expected to be a large participant in the offering.

"Would-be buyers," one banker said, "are literally clamoring at bankers' doors for the bonds." And he added that the big awakening here regarding the wisdom of investing in the issue doubtless was based in part on the "growl" heard in London over the favorable terms upon which the American buyer will become a partner in the loan. One of the important features of the loan is that every investor so desiring can become a syndicate member and obtain the securities at the same price as the larger banks and bankers joining it. It was explained that to accomplish this was more than gratifying. Even Chiwas explained that to accomplish this It was explained that to accomplish this result the small investor could go to his bank or banker and request that his subscription be added to that of the larger participant, so that the benefit of the syndicate price for the bonds might be realized by all desiring to obtain them.

Price Is 961/4 To Syndicate.

The net price to syndicate members is 96%, the % of 1 per cent over 96, the price originally set, to be used in paying the expenses of distribution of the

After the full amount of the loan has ocen subscribed for by those desiring to enter the syndicate the books will be closed, and thereafter any one wishing a purchase the bonds will be compelled to pay 98, the price set for that portion of the public which does not take advantage of the syndicate privilege. It is understood that one of the important points that practically has been agreed upon is that subscribers to the syndicate will receive the privilege of paying for the bonds in full or in three or four installments the last installments. four installments, the last installment or four installments, the last installment to be paid in January, 1916.

Another important feature in connection with the bonds and, according to H. P. Davison, of the Morgan firm, a most important feature, is the value placed upon the securities by the New York stock exchange in placing them on a level with United States Government bonds in the matter of commissions.

Treasury Officials See Benefit to U.S. From Allies' War Loan

Two United States Treasury officials today discussed the Anglo-French loan, and both in favorable vein. "All this money is to be spent on this side of the water," said United States Treasurer John Burke. "It States Treasurer John Burke. "It will be spent for provisions, as I understand it, and under the terms of the loan the American farmer will eventually reap the benefit in sustained prices, although the majority of the producers of the Middle West have not a nickel invested in it.

"It may be true that some of this money will be invested in munitions, but even that is not unfavorable. A big portion of the munitions money will find its way back to the rank and file, of the people through payment for raw materials and labor."

Lawrence Becker, solicitor for the Treasury Department, saw the situation in the same light.

Treasury Department, saw the situation in the same light.

"It is going to help the wheat farmer and the corn farmer, and without a particle of risk to their pocketbooks," he said. "The loan, although financed almost entirely in the East, will be of more direct and general benefit to the West.

the West.
"There will be money made, of course, by the banker and big grain interests of the East, but it cannot help but maintain prices in the West. The loan undoubtedly will be beneficial so long as the money is confined to the purchase of provisions.
